TOOL KIT HELPS INOCULATE BUSINESSES AGAINST EFFECTS OF INFLUENZA PANDEMIC

Trent Hills - A Pandemic Planning Tool Kit released today to businesses across the province will help them prepare for an influenza pandemic. Prepared by the Ontario Chamber of Commerce, the kit will be made available to 57,000 businesses across Ontario in an effort to minimize disruption to the province's economy should a pandemic occur.

"This is not about being alarmist. It is about being ready," says Len Crispino, President & CEO of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce. "Although we hope that scientific warnings of an influenza pandemic will never be realized we have a responsibility to our employees and our customers to be prepared with a plan that will enable us to continue operating as best as possible during a widespread emergency of this kind."

Scientists predict an influenza pandemic could occur within the next few years and yet statistics show that few small and medium businesses have plans in place to contend with this eventuality.

"Our local economy and individual businesses were impacted by the SARS (Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome) outbreak in 2003 and the blackout later that same year," explains Karen Gainor, President of the Trent Hills & District Chamber of Commerce. "The Pandemic Planning Tool Kit will help local businesses prepare themselves for the next catastrophic event, ultimately reducing the impact on business owners and their employees."

The toolkit includes the following:

- Estimates of potential staff absences
- Legislative requirements governing staff absences during an emergency and subsequent return to work
- List of possible effects to services and business operations
- Prevention techniques to limit the spread of disease
- Business continuity checklist
- Additional resources

"We urge all businesses to take the threat of a pandemic seriously," emphasizes Crispino. "Careful planning and preparation will help businesses protect themselves from such things as staff absences, energy supply disruptions and trade interruptions."

The Pandemic Planning Tool Kit is available electronically or in hard copy from the Trent Hills & District Chamber of Commerce or online at www.trenthillschamber.ca
